Chrysler Strikers Ordered to Leave Company's Plants

Detroit Circuit Judge Hands Out Decision Against "Sit-Downers"

TRESPASS ALLEGED

Meanwhile, Labor Wins Victory Against Remington-Rand, Inc.

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—Circuit Judge Allan Campbell granted an injunction Monday calling up the sit-down strikers to evacuate the plants of the Chrysler corporation in this area which they have occupied since last Monday.

Judge Campbell held that even if the Wagner Labor Relations Act "is valid" it still does not give sit-down strikers the right to occupy property.

He declared "respect for law and order and for the courts is menaced."

Labor Wins Decision

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The Labor Relations Board ordered Remington-Rand, Inc., Sunday to take back 4,000 employees the board said had lost their jobs in a strike that started last May in six of the office equipment company's plants. After recounting, in a 100-page decision, developments in the strike that the American Federation of Labor says still continues, the board said:

"From thousands of pages of testimony in this proceeding, there may be distilled two very plain facts: The utter refusal of the respondent (Remington-Rand) to bargain collectively with its employees and the cold, deliberate ruthlessness with which it fought the strike which is refusal to bargain had precipitated."

"Callous Disregard"

The board said that if provisions of the Wagner National Labor Relations act "ever required justification, one need go no further than the facts in this case." It added:

"Over 6,000 employees, with their families and dependents, are subjected to the miseries of a prolonged strike, the people of six communities experience the economic hardships that inevitably result when an accustomed source of income is suddenly withdrawn, these same communities are turned into war-torn camps and unreasoning hatreds are created that lead to abuses alien to a sane civilization—all because the respondent refused to recognize the rights of 6,000 employees."

"In the language of the average person, the respondent, through Rand, its president, has exhibited a callous, imperturbable disregard of the rights of its employees that is medieval in its assumption of power over the lives of men and shocking in its concept of the status of the modern industrial worker."

The board said the strikes involved in its decision occurred in plants at Syracuse, Ill. and Tonawanda, N. Y., Middleboro, Ct. and Norwood and Marietta, Ohio.

The board's decision following closely an earlier one from Secretary Perkins to James H. Rand, Jr., company president, to meet her here Thursday to consider renewal of negotiations with an A. F. of L. union. A company official said Rand would be glad to talk with her.

Lineup of Registered Jersey Bulls, as They Will Appear at Kraft's Dairy Field Day Here Saturday

Here is what Hope is going to see at Kraft-Phenix Cheese corporation's dairy field day at the local cheese factory Saturday, March 20—a great display of registered Jersey bulls and high-grade Jersey cows. The first shipment of bulls reached Hope this Monday, one of the animals being the grandson of Ferns Wexford Noble, five-time grand champion of the National Dairy Show.

Later this week additional bulls and many head of high-grade Jersey cows will be forwarded here. The complete Kraft livestock show will include a dozen bulls and from 15 to 30 head of cows—all except the prize bull being offered for sale to the local dairy public.

The photograph was made at the dairy field day recently celebrated at Denison, Texas, headquarters of the southwest division of the Kraft company.

Garland Sheriff's Election Is Upheld

Supreme Court Rejects Appeal of Clyde Wilson, His Opponent

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court upheld Monday the right of Marion Anderson to serve as Garland county sheriff, holding that Garland circuit court acted correctly in dismissing an election suit in which Clyde Wilson, one of Anderson's opponents, contested his nomination.

Anderson received 4,878 votes to 1,664 for Wilson in last August's Democratic primary.

Wilson's suit said he would be the nominee "if the returns could be purged of illegal votes."

Madrid Sets Off Mines on Rebels

Tremendous Explosion Loosed Against University City Sector

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Four tremendous explosions, apparently from government mines in battle-scarred University City, rocked Madrid Monday as insurgent artillery shells tore great holes in buildings in the downtown district.

Monger reports from the University City zone, where government militiamen and insurgent troops have contested for weeks, described the explosive attacks as fresh attempts to route General Franco's forces from their barricaded positions.

Earhart Delayed on World Flight

Heavy Storm Over Pacific Forces Postponement of Takeoff

OAKLAND, Calif.—(AP)—A storm covering nearly one-third of the 2,400 miles between here and Honolulu Sunday forced postponement of Amelia Earhart's take-off on her projected 27,000-mile world flight.

George Putnam, Miss Earhart's husband, said "definitely" there would be no take-off Sunday. The famous aviator had planned to hop at 5 p. m. Sunday (8 p. m. EST).

The storm turned back Pan-American Airways' Hawaii Clipper several hours after it had left Alameda for the islands. It returned to its base here. Pan-American said the big plane encountered a low pressure area and strongly adverse winds. It carried two passengers and a crew of eight.

Putnam said a decision on the take-off would depend upon the storm's movement. The depression area centered about 800 miles off the coast and registered a comparatively low barometer reading of 29.50 inches.

Weather forecasters said the storm was not particularly violent but that it set up a series of unfavorable conditions, including headwinds for 800 miles or more and then cross-winds for the rest of the route.

Finds 10 Oyster Pearls

TOLEDO, Ohio.—(AP)—William R. Neale, member of the Chamber of Commerce, says he found ten pearls in a plate of oysters he ordered at the chamber's dining room. The oysters had been cooked, however, and all the pearls were blackened and valueless. They ranged in size from that of a green pea to blackhead.

FUNERAL SUNDAY

Marvin Straughn and Coy Mims Reported in Critical Condition

Charles Griffith, 31, of McCaskill, died Saturday night in a Nashville hospital of injuries sustained Thursday morning about 12 miles east of Nashville on Highway 24 when a truck in which he and three other McCaskill men were riding plunged into a ditch when the steering gear broke.

Clark Warren, 50, of McCaskill, driver of the truck, was killed instantly.

Griffith sustained a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain and fractures of both legs below the knees. The body was returned to McCaskill where funeral and burial services were held Sunday afternoon.

He is survived by his widow and parents.

The two other occupants of the truck, Marvin Straughn and Coy Mims, were reported Monday to be in a critical condition at the Nashville hospital.

Straughn sustained a dislocated hip and numerous lacerations about the body. Mims sustained head and chest injuries, several fractured ribs and lacerations about the body.

Warren, driver of the truck, lost control when the steering gear broke. The truck plunged into a ditch, shifting the load of lumber which crushed all four men.

Mr. Burke now has charge of the Missouri and Memphis, and part of the Illinois, divisions, with headquarters at Poplar Bluff, Mo. He left the Hope police force April 30, 1935, joining the Missouri Pacific police the next day.

He served under Assistant Chief Special Agent Ed Monroe of the Little Rock division until December 8, 1936, when he was transferred to the Memphis division, with headquarters at Wynne, Ark.

Bookies Closed by Order of Bailey

State Ranger Head Puts Stop to Bookmaking at Hot Springs

LITTLE ROCK—Gray Albright, superintendent of the Arkansas State Rangers, said Sunday night that he was sent to Hot Springs to put a stop to bookmaking there Saturday, by order of Governor Bailey.

"We received reports that the bookies were opening up again, and Governor Bailey ordered me to go to Hot Springs to investigate and to stop them if I found that our information was correct," Mr. Albright said.

The Ranger superintendent said that he talked with Garland county law enforcement officers and learned that three bookmakers had resumed operation following adjournment of the legislature Thursday.

"I told the officers that the places would have to be closed, and deputy sheriffs were sent to close the bookmakers," Mr. Albright said. "The sheriff told me the bookies closed immediately."

Mr. Albright said that he understood that gambling had not been resumed at the Southern Club or Club Belvedere, where gambling equipment was seized by Rangers and state Revenue Department officers early in January.

Roumania Queen Not Seriously Ill

Stricken by Influenza, Poison Report Is Unconfirmed

BUCHAREST, Roumania.—(AP)—Dowager Queen Marie of Roumania was reported "seriously but not dangerously ill" Monday as physicians sought to diagnose the malady which sent her suddenly to bed last Thursday.

Foreign reports that poison was suspected could not be confirmed officially. One informant described the attack as influenza complicated by an intestinal inflammation.

Early Report

BUCHAREST, Roumania.—(AP)—Dowager Queen Marie of Roumania was reported early Monday by a member of the royal household to be in a serious condition and partially paralyzed.

The court official said her illness started with an attack of influenza which had become complicated by intestinal inflammation.

Two physicians were in constant attendance on the dowager queen, mother of King Carol, 11, and a Vienna specialist on ailments of the alimentary tract prepared to fly to Bucharest at dawn.

King Carol and Queen Mother Marie of Yugoslavia, daughter of the ill queen, were at her bedside most of the time, the court official said.

Her illness was accompanied by a high fever, "somewhat over 100 degrees." Her condition took a turn for the worse early Saturday.

Her daughter, Queen Mother Marie of Yugoslavia, who was nursing an influenza patient of her own, her son, King Peter, immediately came from Belgrade. She was able to leave her son to comfort her mother, the court official said, because the book-king of Yugoslavia is recovering from his illness.

Monday night was seen as the critical period. If the weather moderates sufficiently the peach crop is expected to come through without great damage, fruit growers said.

The official forecast for Arkansas Monday night is fair, continued cold, temperature below freezing with heavy frost; Tuesday fair, slowly rising temperatures.

Snow Over Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK—March winds blew great quantities of unwanted snow and sleet into most of Arkansas Sunday. Freezing and subfreezing temperatures were recorded at several points in northern and western Arkansas.

Snow fell at Hot Springs and Fort Smith, and at Little Rock something approximating a snow storm moved in about 8:30 p. m. sleet was reported at Texarkana.

Heavy Loss of Fruit Expected

At Little Rock, C. C. Randall, assistant agricultural extension director, said it will be "several days before we can tell definitely what effect the cold will have on the fruit, but from reports it looks like there is going to be a pretty heavy loss."

Observer J. S. Prince at the University of Arkansas experiment station said "freezing weather" expected Sunday night would kill peaches in western Arkansas, and added that plums might be injured.

By the Associated Press

A March cold spell routed recent balmy weather in most of the South Sunday. A biting wind drove light snows into sections of Tennessee, Arkansas and Virginia.

Official forecasts for Monday indicated more snow in several states, extending as far south as North Georgia. Nashville and Memphis reported shallow snow blankets. Knoxville expected rain and Chattanooga had a sinking thermometer, nearing the freezing point. Atlanta's mild 32 to 59.

Freeze and Frost Predicted Monday Night for State

Highland Peach District Said to Be Slightly Damaged

SNOW IN ARKANSAS

Low Temperature of 28½ Is Recorded Here Sunday Night

Sunshine and slowly rising temperatures brought optimistic statements Monday from leading orchardists of southwest Arkansas who expressed belief that fruit crops escaped serious damage from Sunday night's snow and freezing temperatures.

Although not definitely determined, the Nashville, Highland and Murfreesboro peach districts is believed undamaged by any serious extent.

This was the opinion of B. L. Thompson, Glen Wallace and Claude W. Garner, operators of Howard county peach orchards. Mr. Garner placed the damage at 10 per cent. This will still leave plenty of peaches on trees that now have a good bud crop, but will lighten the yield on orchards that had a light bud crop, Mr. Garner said.

Low of 28½ Here

A lower temperature was registered here than at Nashville. The low at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment station was reported to be 28½ degrees.

Nashville recorded a low of 31, Highland 30 and Murfreesboro 29. The greatest damage was seen to peach trees in low spots and where condition of trees are weak. The crop in these sections is spotted with some orchards having abundant bud crops while others have light bud crops. The peach district as a whole has one of the largest bloom crops in several years.

By the Associated Press

March winds whipped snow, sleet and rain over much of the South Monday bringing an abrupt halt to spring-like weather.

Temperatures dropped below the freezing mark in some sections of Tennessee and Arkansas, where the wintry assault threatened damage to the peach crop. Orchards in western Arkansas reported that a hard wind prevented ice from forming on open blooms, saving a large part of the crop.

Monday night was seen as the critical period. If the weather moderates sufficiently the peach crop is expected to come through without great damage, fruit growers said.

The official forecast for Arkansas Monday night is fair, continued cold, temperature below freezing with heavy frost; Tuesday fair, slowly rising temperatures.

University Head Raps Court Plan

Dr. James Conant of Harvard Forecasts Grave Consequences

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(AP)—President James Bryant Conant of Harvard University Sunday night called proposed methods for changing the Supreme Court "dangerous in the extreme."

In an open letter to Senators David I. Walsh and Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. of Massachusetts, the Harvard president asserted that "if the Supreme Court is altered without seeking the opinion of the people, I do not believe the alteration will be satisfactory to the conscience of the community." Unless this national conscience is satisfied, I fear the gravest consequences.

"I am not one who believes the recent decisions of the Supreme Court confront the country with no serious problems," Dr. Conant said. "I believe they do."

"Personally I should wish to live under the present constitution as written, but as interpreted by the minority of the present court. Some measures should be devised to alter the existing situation. Even the proposal now before the Senate, if cast as a constitutional amendment (thereby fixing the size of the court), might be defensible."

Hydrophobia Could Be Eliminated With Proper Public Co-operation

By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

(No. 161)

In July, 1885, more than 50 years ago, the famous French scientist, Louis Pasteur, gave the first Pasteur treatment to a human being, to control the condition called rabies, or hydrophobia. Today we know that this disease could be eliminated with scientific methods, if complete public co-operation could be obtained. Hydrophobia seldom, if ever, appears in Great Britain because of proper use of the Pasteur method and because of a quarantine on dogs and other animals which may be brought into the country.

Pasteur made the discovery in a relatively simple manner. He knew that the virus which causes the disease attacks the nervous system. He took the brain of a dog that had died of hydrophobia and injected some of this material under the skin of other animals, which then developed the disease. Pasteur felt sure then that the brain of the infected animal contained the poison.

After trying to weaken this poison so that it could be injected into a human being, to give him the disease in a mild form—as, for example, vaccination does in smallpox—he finally arrived at the procedure now used.

Material from the nervous system was dried in a tube and kept that way for some time. When that material was injected into a dog into which later from a mad dog, the dog to which the preventive material had been given did not get the disease.

The first animal experiments were completed in May, 1884, and were then confirmed by other scientists. Several months later the method was used on a boy named Jean Baptiste DuPille who had saved several children from being attacked by a mad dog and had been severely bitten while doing it. The boy lived, and a monument in his honor was erected in front of the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

Throughout the world there are few monuments erected either to doctors who have made discoveries that have saved thousands of lives, or to patients who have helped the doctors in their work. The one for Jean Baptiste DuPille is probably the only one of its kind.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Nailing Finger Biter

Mothers used to put bitter aloes on nails to discourage the boy or girl bent on nail destruction. Still another way was to use a ruler. Tying hands behind backs, as a reminder, was resorted to, also. And of course, lengthy scoldings and lectures.

Such tactics were almost useless, and besides, cruel. Try an experiment and take your Johnny, one fine day (if he is a nervous little nail-chewer) on a round of pleasure, with nothing to worry about, such as friends who bulldoze him or lessons to burden him; put on his best and most becoming clothes and give him some money to spend. Keep him laughing and sunny all day, and also an eye out for those hands. I'd venture to say that not once has he lifted his hands to his mouth, unless it was from sheer over-excitement and joy.

Emotional Upset to Blame
 Which proves something, at least. That the habit is emotional, and only emotional in the beginning. Perhaps it is a direct worry, such as lessons, or playmates, or even family trouble that causes it. But it may be that the whole pressure of living is just too much. Inferiority, lack of confidence, perhaps a secret feeling of guilt, which some children develop easily, are worries that count for far more nervousness than tangible reasons.

Children are secretive. They won't tell you what they are feeling. Sometimes I think they'd rather die almost than own up to the fact that they think they are not much good. It lies in their imaginations, but imaginations can be cruel.

So what had best be done, if other means have been tried and have failed, not only to cure nailing but by any other habit as well?

Cure Must Come From Self
 First of all, the less said to the sufferer the better. Don't notice him. It does anything at all. Any urge to improve anything at all. Any urge to improve his hands, will have to come from his own mind.

He may need to be much, much busier than he is, and get so interested in games or friends that he will forget his hands. If, reversely, he has too much time to do, and too much excitement, he may need more placid hours to himself. Tell him he is handsome and the very ticket. Fix him up a little bit extra.

Try to ferret out any underlying causes and vague worry or depression, and apply measures there. Give him manicures, ever so simple. Don't force him into situation that he dreads. See that he is tired enough to go right to sleep at bedtime.

Only nervous children resort to such habits and the best course is to remove the causes if possible.

Potpourri: Respect for the Dead... Canine Chaos Getting the Bird

HOLLYWOOD—Short takes: One of the smaller studios made such a poor picture that the other day, when it was finished, a member of the publicity department blew Tap and everyone stood up and observed a three-minute silence.

The colony is due for a new kind of night club, one decorated with actual movie sets in which parts of big pictures have been filmed.

A promoter is talking to studio executives about the scheme, and it's likely that he'll be allowed to rent or buy the entire sets of ballrooms, period drawing rooms, glorified night clubs, and the like, changing them about once a month.

Studios won't furnish any used actors, though.

Noisiest household in the colony is Bette Davis'. She has five dogs and they all hate each other.

How to get a job: A newspaper reporter prepared a flattering obituary of a prominent producer. Laid it on thick. Then he showed it to the executive, who was so pleased that he gave the scribbler a $500-a-week berth as a scenarist.

Quick Change

Two metal airplanes, rented for the filming of "Honey Moon Pilot," were transformed into border patrol ships with coats of water-soluble khaki paint and insignia. They took off, with a camera plane following, and ducked into a heavy cloud bank.

Emerging into clear sky a few seconds later, the photographer gasped when he found himself shooting a couple of glistening, silvery ships, which had been washed clean of their paint.

It was like those errors which sometimes creep into pictures—when a man in a light tweed suit is seen going into a door and a second later is shown on the other side of it in a dark suit and overcoat.

Leslie Howard, winding up his tour in "Hamlet," will be cast as a Shakespearean actor when he returns to Hollywood to make the last picture on his contract here.

Cecil B. DeMille is trying to borrow his own foster-daughter, Katherine DeMille, for a part in "The Buccaneer." But she's under contract to 20th Century-Fox, which had intended featuring her in a production of its own.

Here's What Science Knows About Snakes

"His wife wants a canary for her birthday," explained Gilman's secretary. "And she's making the rounds of pet shops listening to auditions."

The daughter of a wealthy director was married the other day to a WPA worker. The young man wants to become a writer on his own merit, and he distressed his father-in-law by refusing a job which would have been specially created for him. So, at the wedding reception, the girl's parents introduced the groom as being "in the government service."

Mary Astor—Mrs. Del Campo—lunching with John Van Druten.

Press-agent item: "Olympic Bradna . . . taken to the Trocadero by her parents in celebration of her new Paramount contract. It was the starlet's first trip to a night club, and she had to go home at 11 p. m."

Ho-hum!—and two years ago Miss Branda was going home at 3 a. m. every day after hoofing in the gloriolous skin-show of Broadway's French Casino. Be fore that she danced at the Chicago Fair, and she has been on the stage as a solo performer since she was 8.

All of which is just another way of saying that even a person who has an unreasoning horror of snakes can enjoy reading about them; and an excellent medium for this purpose is at hand in a new book called "Snakes and Their Ways," by C. H. Curran and Carl Kauffeld (Harpers: $3.50).

Here is a well-written summary of what science knows about snakes. Some of it is rather surprising, and all of it is interesting. The authors tell you, for instance, how it is that a mongoose can lick a cobra and yet fail to lick a rattlesnake, explain how a constrictor kills its prey, and discuss the evolution of the poisonous species.

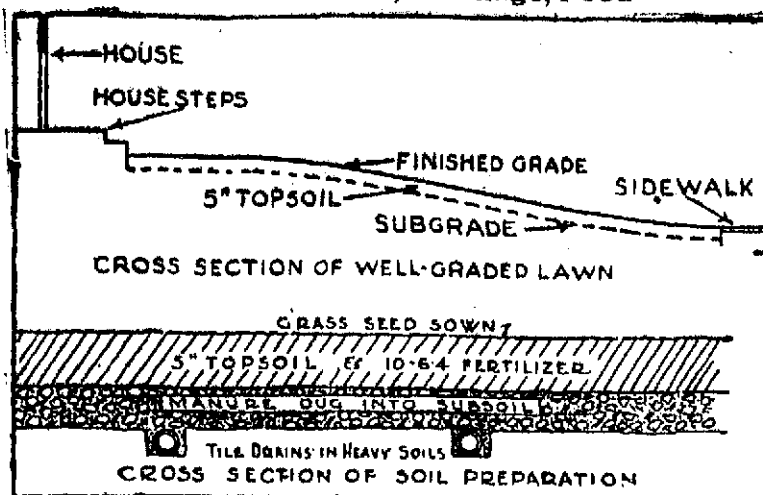

What makes a book of this kind most readable is its account of the experience of herpetologists (snake fanciers, if you prefer). This one is a sample, has a hair-raising little yarn about the expert who experimented on the power of poisons by injecting minute doses of venom into his own veins. He got along all right until he tried a tenth of a drop of African mamba venom. What happened immediately thereafter will give you a new respect for the lethal powers of that reptile.

Poisonous snakes in this country are not so deadly as legend asserts. The authors estimate that only 30 per cent of American snakes bites bring death, even if there is no medical treatment at all. Just to play safe, though, they tell you just what to do if you do get bitten.

GOOD GARDENING

Lawn Needs Sun, Drainage, Food

Cross-sectional drawing showing how to prepare a well-drained soil to provide a good lawn.

By DONALD GRAY

NEA Gardening Consultant

A good lawn depends on sunshine, drainage of the subsoil, depth of topsoil containing plant food, and intelligent laboring forever afterwards.

There are no short cuts by cheating in preparation of the ground, and there is no variety of lawn that will grow without watering, fertilizing, and weeding.

Growing grass must be considered the same as growing a farm crop. The plants must have a depth of topsoil for their roots, and as the crop is cut off plant food must be put back into the soil.

There is no satisfactory variety of grass that will grow in dense shade. Some varieties will grow on top of the roots of some kinds of trees in partial shade, but if it is a lawn that is wanted, then cut out most of the trees.

For the initial step in making a lawn, the subsoil should be cut down or filled to a grade not less than five inches of the final grade of the lawn. If this subsoil is sticky clay, it will be impervious to air and water, and it is as hard to grow grass on top of it as it would be on the top of a concrete platform.

Thoughts Of Spring

Cardinal's merry call on high Rang out, "Old world, Spring-time is night!" The robin and the blue bird flew in search of nesting places new, While crocus and wee snow drop white Unfolded lovely blossoms bright, As flocks of black birds noisily Sat gossiping in an oak tree.

But from behind the barren hills The North wind came with breath that chilled, Gray clouds too' cross the sky did blow And from them fell soft flakes of snow. Cardinal sought a cedar warm While blackbirds chided, "False alarm!"—Selected.

Nine inches at Cincinnati. CINCINNATI, O.—(U)—A storm area from the South and Southwest swept through the Ohio valley Sunday, leaving a record March snowfall of nine inches in greater Cincinnati.

The snow fell without interruption for 36 hours at Cincinnati. Commercial transport planes were grounded or passed up scheduled stops and motor buses from the West arrived one to two hours late.

Two men were killed in or near Cincinnati and less serious accidents were numerous.

W. C. Devereaux, Weather Bureau meteorologist, termed the storm "remarkable" for the manner in which it fastened wires and trees to depths of three to six inches.

When DAPHNE BRETT took her younger sister, JENNIFER, under hand in an effort to launch her on a successful career in New York, difficulties immediately arose between the two. Jennifer resented any such interest and promptly defied Daphne.

She planned to elope with TUCKER ALINGBY, wealthy playboy, and would have, had not Daphne stopped the affair. And before that, Jennifer had made a play for the affections of LARRY SMITH, brilliant young architect with whom Daphne was in love.

After Daphne had prevented her elopement with Tuck, Jennifer became sullen. For a period of more than three months the sisters scarcely spoke to each other. And then Daphne broke the ice, sending Jennifer on vacation to an exclusive shore resort. And the plan apparently worked, for when Jennifer returned she had lost her old bitterness, it seemed. Laughing, she got off her train in New York to tell Daphne that she had met the great theatrical producer, GORDON HERZBERG. Daphne was thrilled, too, since the theater was her first love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

"LET me go and tell him. He's waiting in the boat house. Oh, this news will mean more to him than anything else I could possibly tell him."

Jennifer stopped and glanced hastily at the blue-covered papers in her hand.

Daphne, sitting cross-legged on the floor, said, "No! A thousand times No! Look, Jennifer, you're only going to tell him that the boss has changed his mind about firing him. He isn't your lover! You aren't going to tell him he's been left a fortune and the word Oh is not in the script. Take that transcendent light out of your eyes. Now come back to the right entrance and do it again."

Jennifer looked dubious for a minute and then did as she was told.

"Much better," Daphne pronounced. "And you're letter perfect in your lines. There's only one other little thing: when you get to the door, open it with your left hand. Don't make a complete turn with your back to the audience when you open the door."

Jennifer blew out her breath and slipped off her negligee. "Daphne, you're wonderful. Hoadley"—Hoadley was the director of Apple Blossoms, the Herzberg production—"asked me where I'd picked up that piece of business with the tea-cup yesterday."

"It's fun, isn't it?" Daphne said wistfully.

"Yes, Oh, say Daphne," Jennifer said behind a yawn, while her alert eyes measured her sister.

"Tuck is back. I'm meeting him for cocktails tomorrow."

Daphne felt as though she had stepped through a hole in the ice. "I thought I laid down the law about cocktails?"

"And about Tuck, too, didn't you?" Jennifer said with an unpleasant smile.

"Sometimes I think I'll give up, but listen, Jennifer, I've more influence with Tuck than you have and I'm going to tell him that I don't want him seeing you."

"It wouldn't surprise me a bit if you did," her sister answered. "But if I were you I wouldn't try."

Daphne set her mouth in a line as straight as Jennifer's.

"Let's both go to bed. We're tired and this heat is getting on our nerves. You open in Philadelphia next Monday, don't you?"

DAPHNE stared into the hot silence of the night, long after Jennifer had gone to sleep, until she convinced herself that Jennifer had only meant to tease her when she had taunted her about Tuck. But since she couldn't be sure that Jennifer really had gotten over Tuck, she was determined to appeal to Tuck once more not to see Jennifer. She'd do it even if she had to pretend that she herself was interested in him.

She made a note to telephone him and ask him to take her for cocktails the following afternoon. It slipped her mind that next day. Too many other things happened.

"SIT down, Miss Brett," Mr. Johnstone, president of the Johnstone Advertising Agency, waved her into a chair that was much too big for her.

He leaned across the big desk and regarded her thoughtfully. Daphne made herself sit still and wondered if her lipstick was a little too red.

"Nice work you've done on the Georgian line."

The Georgian line was the merchandise of a cosmetic house, one of the accounts that Daphne had developed. "Oh, thank you, Mr. Johnstone."

"Hammer and I have been talking over your proposed campaign in department stores and the tour you planned in the presentation. We think it is an excellent idea. Every bit just the way you laid it out. With one exception: the company wants you to take the show on tour and manage it."

"But I can't. I have my work here and . . ."

"You'll have your work here when you come back, Miss Brett. This account means a great deal to us. The company has doubled its appropriation in the last year and, if this trip is the success we anticipate, it will be more than doubled next year. Also, in addition to your salary, you are to receive a bonus which will mount considerably since you are to receive a percentage of the sales. Mr. Hammer mentioned $2000 as a bonus . . ."

Two thousand dollars!

"Oh, Mr. Johnstone!" Daphne had risen to her feet and bent over the desk toward him, "Of course, I'll do it! When do we begin?"

She would make all her arrangements for copy and tickets and accommodations in the next three days, he said, and she could expect to be back in New York by the middle of November.

TWO thousand dollars! Two thousand dollars! Yes, please, let me talk to the art department. Mr. Jones are the layouts finished for the Journal ads on the Georgian Creme account? Two thousand dollars in the bank will make it possible for me to marry Larry, Miss Blake will you make out a production order for the Tuesday Blade, 300 lines on two columns? I won't ever have to worry about Jennifer if I know that money is there. Jennifer will do well in the theater but, at best, it is hazardous financially.

At last, Daphne gave up. She simply couldn't think of anything else.

"I have some errands to do, Miss Thornley," she told the telephone operator at 4 o'clock. "If anyone is looking for me, take the message."

Twenty minutes later from a telephone booth in Grand Central she rang up Larry.

"Hi, my gall! Where have you been?" Larry was fairly booming into the telephone, "I've been calling you for the last 10 minutes. I've got exciting news for you."

"But, Larry, you don't even hear what I'm saying. I'm trying to tell you I have exciting news for you. I can't wait to tell . . ."

"No matter what it is, you're going to drop everything when you hear this young lady. It's news!" Daphne gave up then. "All right, selfish! I'm on my way home now. Come up as soon as you can."

Broad Program of Social Service Is Started by State

Total of New and Old Financing in Arkansas Is 220 Millions

HUGE PENSION BILL Combined State and Federal Pension Totals 4 Million Yearly

Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of six articles reviewing legislation enacted at the recent session of the Arkansas General Assembly. Others in the series will follow daily.

By ED. L. CAMPBELL

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The 1937 Arkansas legislature, headed Gov. Carl E. Bailey's admonition to avoid penny-penny economy, launched the state on a broad social and political program aimed at a stronger economic position.

To carry out all phases of state government for the 1937-39 biennium, the general assembly authorized spending more than $220,000,000.

Much of this spending will be done under direction of two score new or reorganized boards, commissions and departments. Administration spokesmen who directed passage of bills creating these agencies, assured legislators that resultant benefits would far exceed initial costs.

Number One spending unit will be the board of finance, charged with re-financing $150,000,000 in highway, toll bridge and road improvement district bonds. Success of the program, Governor Bailey said, would save the state $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 in interest payments. His spokesmen added it would permit elimination of tolls on bridges, more road construction, reduction of gasoline tax and auto licenses, and assumption by the state of debt burdens now carried by landowners in bridge improvement districts.

4 Millions for Pensions Ranking social agency is the new Welfare Department. Created to succeed an agency less than two years old, the new division will be charged with spending more than $4,000,000 annually in state and federal funds. From it will come old age pensions and benefit payments for blind, dependent and crippled children, needy unemployed and indigent sick.

Principal political unit set up by the legislature is the State Civil Service Commission. Beginning July 1 it will place nearly 80 per cent of all state employees under a merit system. Governor Bailey wanted it to be the first bill to reach his desk. His spokesmen insisted it would work toward efficiency of personnel, economy in departmental operations, and build a higher-type public employee. All legislators were not so enthusiastic, however, and opponents defeated a proposal to submit a constitutional amendment which would have made the system permanent.

An industrial and agricultural commission set up at the governor's request will concentrate its efforts on attracting outside capital to Arkansas for development of the state's natural resources.

A publicity commission will spend thousands of dollars advertising the state to the outside world. One of its major activities in the near future will be the arrangement of an Arkansas exposition at the forthcoming New York World's Fair. While the industrial commission makes a bid for new capital, the publicity commission will endeavor to bring to the state a larger portion of the tourist trade that has become a major factor in the American scene.

Penal Reform A revamped penal board, supplied with both money and authority, will attempt to transform the state penitentiary into a semi-industrial plant from which other state-supported institutions will be compelled to purchase their supplies.

Arkansas will attempt to improve its relations with sister-states and federal government through activity of an Interstate Cooperation Commission composed of 15 honorary members. Labor affairs will be centralized under a reorganized department. A new commission will supervise extended operations of an enlarged state police force. Similar governing units will be charged with carrying out soil conservation, flood control, park development and other activities.

Control over virtually all of these units is vested in the governor. Through them will Carl E. Bailey attempt to carry out his program.

The boxing game is beginning to show signs of humanity.
First, a fund is created in Washington, D. C., to take care of fighters injured in the ring.
Now John B. Kelly, secretary of revenue for the state of Pennsylvania says that he is going to sponsor a bill in the state legislature to provide creation of a pension fund for old, disabled boxers.

The next thing you know the managers are going to stop shouting they can't hurt us.
Mr. Kelly revealed his plan at a banquet of ex-fighters in Philadelphia. Some 200 of the old-timers attended.
For some, it was the first square meal they'd had in quite a little while. For others, it was, of course, just another ripe olive and tall celery affair.

Mr. Kelly was thinking of the first group when he promised that he would try to get the Pennsylvania legislature to approve his plan of taking a portion of the gate receipts of each fight held in the state and setting it aside for the boys when they reach old age.

Perhaps you will wonder what on earth a boxer needs with a pension fund when the papers are full each day of this or that plug-ugly getting some princely sum for 45 minutes, more or less, of scuffling. If they can't hold onto that money then they don't deserve either sympathy or a pension, you might say.

But it must be pointed out that the boxers don't get the so-called purse in its entirety, they are most fortunate if they wind up with one-half of the purse. Frequently, there are poor, misguided fellows like Primo Carnera who find out that there have been more bond issues and stock issues on them than U. S. Steel, Pfd.

And, anyway, it must be remembered that the poor devils do take quite a thrumping around the head and generally lose what sense and dollars, too—they had, if any, in short order. For its own sake, if not for the sake of the unfortunate, the boxing game should take care of these mumbbling misables.

The rest of the country would do well to follow the lead taken by Washington, which is a comparative newcomer to the boxing game since the racket was legalized there only a few years ago.

The Washington system doesn't provide for a pension, but rather a dole. It takes care of the injured fighters, and not aged ones. Which is quite enough to start with. The pension is a come later.

Once or twice a year the promoters, Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn, stage a benefit program with 10 per cent of the gate receipts going to the fund. In addition to this, all passes carry a 10-cent tax, which helps swell the fund. And, to top it off, the fighters themselves contribute 1 per cent of their purses to the fund each week.

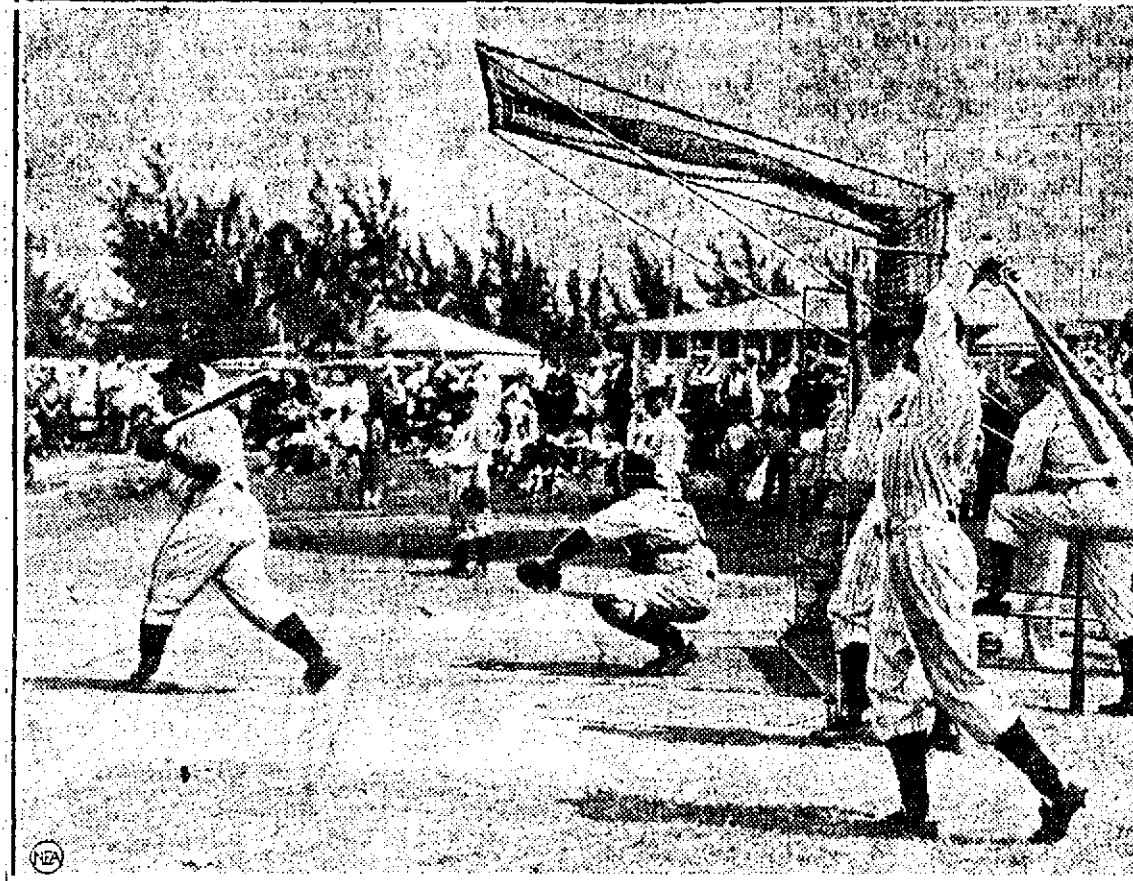

And so whenever a fighter is injured in a Washington ring—say, his eye badly cut, or jaw broken—and he is unable to box for some time and is unable to provide food or lodging or clothing for himself or his family, he need only inform the boxing commission's mercy committee and collect sufficient money each week to tide him over.

Strangely, shortly after this fund was set up, Washington fighters were hounded by an injury agree. There were several broken jaws, crushed ribs, smashed noses and, indeed, one broken leg.

The fund took care of them all. Not one had to crawl through the ropes the following week and beg for alms.

Former Football Players Under Browne Serve as Pallbearers.

CLARKSVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Players who once performed under his tutelage on the gridiron served as pallbearers Sunday at final rites for Edgar O. Brown, College of the Ozarks athletic director, who died Thursday night.

Dr. Wiley L. Hurie, president of the college, directed the services from the First Presbyterian church.

"When Coach Brown was coaching some of the greatest football teams in the southwest, he always went ahead to scout for his boys," Dr. Hurie said. "Now he has gone to scout the greatest being in man's existence—entrance into eternal life. He has gone to confer with the Master Player."

"In my 17 years of intimate acquaintance with him I came to know he conceived his profession as meaning more than winning games. It was to develop men. He played his men only when they were in the best condition, and he taught his men to know no defeat."

Pallbearers were John Tucker, Clark Reasoner, S. M. Hamm and Sam Ballard, former Arkansas Tech players and Cleod Stephens, Con Conti, Francis Poteet, Irvin Bartlett, Joe Hickman and LeMoyné Martin, former Ozarks athletes.

Jonesboro Wins Cage Tournament

Golden Hurricane Team Noses Out Little Rock, 37 to 36.

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—(AP)—Substitute Raymond King pitched the Jonesboro Golden Hurricane to its first state senior high basketball championship since 1916 Saturday night when he fired two shots from under the basket in the closing minutes of the annual state tournament to defeat Little Rock Tigers, 37-36.

Exciting Finish
The lead changed three times in the last 75 seconds of play as Jonesboro first overcame a Tiger margin of one point, subsequently dropped one point behind when Hughes fired a crisp shot for Little Rock, and then went on to assume an unchallenged lead.

Howard Hughes, ace Tiger scorer, kept the Tigers in the lead under the closing minute as he tossed in a total of 19 points.

Both squads had their ranks thinned materially by fouls as the final quarter opened. Little Rock leading 29-25.

King's foul boosted the count to 29-26, and in rapid order Osmont shot a foul and King loomed one from the floor, tying the count. Hughes crisp shot and foul again sent Little Rock into the lead, 32-29, but shots from the floor by Osmont and King put Jonesboro ahead, 33-32.

Hughes and King scored from the floor in succession, but Hughes missed an opportunity to tie the count when he missed a foul shot. Osmont's final basket protected the lead when Hughes dropped in another crisp shot.

Alexander, Henderson and Pharis of Jonesboro and Martindale and Hall of Little Rock were named as Officials. Teddy Jones and Pete Creed assessed a total of 38 fouls.

Willard Tilley proved the kingpin of the Jonesboro attack, pacing the Lowell Manning club with 10 points. Little Rock scored a major upset by eliminating the title favorite Beebe Badgers, 38-28, in the semi-finals.

Jonesboro swept through the semi-finals with a 49-29 triumph over Harrison. They reached the finals through four top-sided victories. The Whitebirds took an early lead over Harrison and continued to widen the margin.

Little Rock breezed through its quarter-final contest with a 46-26 win over Casa. Jonesboro smashed Little Rock, 50-33. Harrison finished on top, 35-32, in a ding-dong battle with Sulphur Rock and Beebe dropped El Dorado's darkhorse Union High quiet, 45-36.

The All-State Team
The Jonesboro High School Hurricanes and Little Rock Tigers, finalists in the state senior high school basketball tournament placed two men each on the first all-state basketball team selected by officials of the tournament.

The selections follow:
First team—Forwards, Willard Tilley of Jonesboro and Lowell Martindale of Little Rock; center, Sluysder Reid of Beebe; guards, Henry Metzler of Jonesboro and Myrl Hall of Little Rock.

Second team—Forwards, Howard Hughes of Little Rock and John Adams of Beebe; center, Gammill of Union High of El Dorado; guards, Mutt Alexander of Jonesboro and John Deese of Beebe.

However, Pete doesn't grumble as he gropes through his life of shadows. He's gay as a night at the Mardi Gras. And he hasn't allowed his infirmity to hold him back in the business world. He's the bustling owner and manager of the prosperous Club Plantation, one of New Orleans' brightest night spots. He bought it, along with a big farm, with his ring earnings, which he saved carefully.

You'll find Pete at the club every night, weaving in and out of the tables to see that everybody's happy and getting their saucers and platters' punches on time. Despite his blindness, Pete is able to get around the club by himself. "I don't bump into as many people or as many tables as some of the customers—they're sort of blind, too, you know, half the time, if you get what I mean," says Pete with a curl of a smile.

Pete with a curl of a smile.

Doesn't Condemn Boxing
Pete is fat and 41—he must be a heavyweight on the scales—but he's still pretty tough.

Every once in a while the boys say that Pete, without any assistance, takes hold of some slobbering celebrator, who has gone to the well once or twice, too often, and heaves him out of the joint—pardon, out of the establishment, we should say, because Pete's place is quite as orderly as any night club.

The two-time bantamweight champion doesn't condemn the fight game for robbing him of his sight. "Why should I sit around cussing to myself and feeling miserable and making everybody else unhappy? Huh? Why should I?" says Pete. "Don't you think it's best to make the best of it? And, anyway," the bright little fellow says with another smile, "and, anyway, I saw everything worth seeing."

Pete still goes to the fights now and then. He likes to hear the thud-thud of gloves on flesh, and to listen to the chatter and clamor of the crowd, and feel and smell the resin and the smoke clouds. Sometimes, he says, he can almost see.

The injury which caused Pete's blindness was suffered in a charity bout. "I was boxing Gussie Lewis in Philadelphia for the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' tobacco fund," says Pete, "when this Lewis cracked me in the eye. I saw stars and it felt like somebody was sticking

The great little old fighter will be glad to see you.

Glad to see you? . . . Well, no—no, that's wrong. Of course, Pete'll be glad that you've dropped in. But he won't be able to see you.

One eye went bad on Pete while he was still the bantamweight champion of the world. The other grew dim and dimmer after his retirement. A few years ago it, too, became totally sightless.

However, Pete doesn't grumble as he gropes through his life of shadows. He's gay as a night at the Mardi Gras. And he hasn't allowed his infirmity to hold him back in the business world. He's the bustling owner and manager of the prosperous Club Plantation, one of New Orleans' brightest night spots. He bought it, along with a big farm, with his ring earnings, which he saved carefully.

You'll find Pete at the club every night, weaving in and out of the tables to see that everybody's happy and getting their saucers and platters' punches on time. Despite his blindness, Pete is able to get around the club by himself. "I don't bump into as many people or as many tables as some of the customers—they're sort of blind, too, you know, half the time, if you get what I mean," says Pete with a curl of a smile.

Pete with a curl of a smile.

Doesn't Condemn Boxing
Pete is fat and 41—he must be a heavyweight on the scales—but he's still pretty tough.

Every once in a while the boys say that Pete, without any assistance, takes hold of some slobbering celebrator, who has gone to the well once or twice, too often, and heaves him out of the joint—pardon, out of the establishment, we should say, because Pete's place is quite as orderly as any night club.

The two-time bantamweight champion doesn't condemn the fight game for robbing him of his sight. "Why should I sit around cussing to myself and feeling miserable and making everybody else unhappy? Huh? Why should I?" says Pete. "Don't you think it's best to make the best of it? And, anyway," the bright little fellow says with another smile, "and, anyway, I saw everything worth seeing."

Pete still goes to the fights now and then. He likes to hear the thud-thud of gloves on flesh, and to listen to the chatter and clamor of the crowd, and feel and smell the resin and the smoke clouds. Sometimes, he says, he can almost see.

The injury which caused Pete's blindness was suffered in a charity bout. "I was boxing Gussie Lewis in Philadelphia for the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' tobacco fund," says Pete, "when this Lewis cracked me in the eye. I saw stars and it felt like somebody was sticking

14 Cities of State Are Represented

No Action on Status of Hope, DeQueen and Prescott Schools

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—A plan to decide the state high school football championship was adopted by representatives of the 14 proposed members of the conference and J. D. Clary of Fordyce, president of the Arkansas Athletic Association here Saturday. Conference members include Pine Bluff, North Little Rock, Hot Springs, El Dorado, Camden, Fordyce, Forrest City, Blytheville, Jonesboro, Fort Smith, Clarksville, Benton, Russellville and Hope provided the latter school reinstated by the Arkansas Athletic Association.

Little Rock Out
Little Rock did not join the conference, and Benton has been invited to become the 14th member.

Under the plan, the team having the largest percentage of wins against conference competition will be eligible for the state title regardless of whether it is a member of the conference.

A team must play five games against conference teams this year to be eligible for the title. The number will be increased to six next year, under the present arrangement.

All appellate authority in eligibility cases has been vested in the A. A. A. No attempt was made to alter its ruling.

Governors Appointed

The group authorized Coach Mervin Perry of Hot Springs, who served as chairman of the meeting, to appoint a governing committee. Two members of the committee, T. H. Alford, superintendent of the North Little Rock public schools, and Clovis Copeland, Arkansas Gazette sports writer, were nominated from the floor. Perry named Wallace Bailey, Russellville coach, and Jack Keady, Arkansas Democrat sports writer, to serve with the original committee.

Following a report that the Little Rock High School would not enter the conference, members of the conference circumscribed the problem by voting to include Little Rock among league member conferences foes, although no member. Hope will not be recognized until reinstated.

Coach Perry said the Hot Springs Kiwanis club would award a championship trophy next season. The conference will provide the award thereafter.

Proposed Rules

Highlights of the tentative constitution of the organization provide that:
No post-season games will be permitted.

All teams must be fully recognized by the A. A. A.

Members of the conference must win at least one conference game every two years to be eligible for further affiliation.

Coach Garland Beavers of North Little Rock, who was chosen by the coaches several months ago to study the plan and put it in workable form, explained the plan and announced that he would not be connected with it further in an official capacity.

Mr. Clary said that although several details remained to be worked out, he believed it was a step in the right direction. He said he believed it would not interfere with the operations of the A. A. A. in any way.

No Action on Suspended Schools

The status of Hope, De Queen and Prescott, suspended from the association several months ago, remained unchanged. The committee did not consider their requests for reinstatement.

T. H. Alford, superintendent of North Little Rock schools and secretary of the committee, said that the matter might be brought up at the next meeting.

Canaway, May 1. Members of the group said they needed more time to complete their investigation of the three schools, started last fall following protests by Hope and DeQueen authorities.

Lawn Needs Sun

quality of seed from a reputable garden supply store. Never buy cheap grass seed from a concern you know nothing about.

Sow the seed evenly at the rate of four pounds to the thousand square feet of surface. Be sure to get the seed evenly distributed. Carefully rake the seed into the top inch of soil. Roll the surface and keep the ground moist at all times. Water lightly morning and evening, when the weather is dry.

Seed can be shown as early in the spring as the ground can be prepared, or early in the fall.

Weeds will grow wherever anything else will grow, but the healthier the grass the fewer the weeds.

Well prepared soil at the beginning of making a lawn will go a long way towards eliminating weeds.
